MARY'S WOODS
LAKE OSWEGO

Vitality in the Village

Understanding the connection between a well-designed community and people's overall resilience and health, our campus master plan for Mary's Woods encourages residents to socialize with each other in a large-scale, pedestrian-centered village environment. From its network of intimate walking paths to its richly textured exterior materials, native flora, and soft lighting, our design supports holistic wellness in an idyllic natural setting.

Our client wanted to establish a significant community presence. Together, we offered a fresh alternative to typical senior housing developments: A master plan that strategically distributes thoughtfully designed senior living amenities across a walkable village campus, is open to public use, and that echoes the layout, material warmth, and human-scale connections of traditional European villages.

Refreshed, renovated, and reintegrated with the larger community, Mary's Woods lets residents, their families, and the public enjoy each other's company amid lovely natural surroundings.

Current events are sharply redefining priorities and reminding us what really matters.

We build resilience projects by:

Facilitating the design process

Each new design process is different, yet every engagement starts by listening. With decades of experience designing senior housing, we help our clients awaken their vision and passion for their communities.

Uncovering your potential

With our interdisciplinary and human-centered approach to community planning, our strategic insights can uncover what makes you special.

Designing for wellness

Well-designed environments can make people safer, happier, more equal, more connected to their world and each other. Good design is good medicine.
